

City Research Online

City St George's, University of London

Citation: Rodgers, J. (2014). From Stalingrad to Grozny: patriotism, political pressure, and literature in the war reporting of Vassily Grossman and Anna Politkovskaya. Paper presented at the Media, War & Conflict's Fifth Anniversary Conference,, 11-04-2013 - 12-04-2013, Royal Holloway, London, UK.

This is the accepted version of the paper.

This version of the publication may differ from the final published version. To cite this item please consult the publisher's version.

Permanent repository link: <https://city-ref-test.eprints-hosting.org/id/eprint/12971/>

Copyright and Reuse: Copyright and Moral Rights remain with the author(s) and/or copyright holders. Copies of full items can be used for personal research or study, educational, or not-for-profit purposes without prior permission or charge, unless otherwise indicated, provided that the authors, title and full bibliographic details are credited, a hyperlink and/or URL is given for the original metadata page and the content is not changed in any way. For full details of reuse please refer to City Research Online policy.

STALINGRAD TO GROZNY

The war reporting of Vassily Grossman and Anna
Politkovskaya.

James Rodgers. City University London.

Vassily Grossman, 1905–64

The Battle of Stalingrad, 1942–3

Grossman interviews a sniper

‘When I first got the rifle, I couldn’t bring myself to kill a living being: one German was standing there for about four minutes, talking, and I let him go. When I killed my first one, he fell at once. Another one ran out and stooped over the killed one, and I knocked him down too ... when I first killed, I was shaking all over: the man was only walking to get some water! ... I felt scared: I’d killed a person! Then I remembered our people and started killing them without mercy.’

(2006: 157)

- ▶ No I don't believe she is still alive. I travel all the time around areas
 - ▶ that have been liberated, and I see what these accursed monsters
 - ▶ have done to old people and children. And Mama was Jewish. A
 - ▶ desire to exchange my pen for a rifle is getting stronger and stronger
 - ▶ in me.
 - ▶ (2006: 224)
-

- ▶ There were black holes and craters from bombs everywhere along the
- ▶ railway. One could see trees broken by explosions. In the fields there
- ▶ were thousands of peasants, men and women, digging anti-tank
- ▶ ditches.
- ▶ We watch the sky nervously and decided to jump off the train if
- ▶ the worst came to the worst. It was moving quite slowly. The
- ▶ moment we arrived in Novozybkov there was an air raid. A bomb
- ▶ fell
- ▶ by the station forecourt. This train wasn't going any further.
- ▶ (2006: 8)